" 1959 census tract street index.

INTRODUCTION

In preparation for the 1960 Census of Population, the Department of Planning, under the direction of the Guilford County Census Tract Committee, has revised the Census Tract Street Index for Greensboro. The Census Tract Street Index shows for every street number, the number of the census tract in which it is located.

Greensboro and the remainder of Guilford County participated in the Census Tract Program of the United States Census Bureau for the first time in 1950. Greensboro, High Point and the unincorporated portion of the county were permanently divided into census tracts. In conjunction with this work the first Census Tract Street Index was prepared in 1948.

For purpose of the 1960 Census, Greensboro has been divided into thirty census tracts. Each tract has been delimited to coincide so far as possible with homogeneous neighborhoods, significant administrative service areas, major physical barriers and similar determinants. Each tract should contain between 2500 and 8000 inhabitants. The table at the end of the index gives population by census tracts with derived data for 1940 and estimates for 1958. Although tract boundaries are permanently established, this does not preclude the subdivision of a tract into two or more component tracts when population growth in these areas justifies further subdivision.

Every ten years in the nation-wide federal census the U. S. Bureau of the Census assembles data on a census tract basis. From the population census come statistics on the people --- age, sex, race, marital status, income, education, employment status, occupation, etc. From the housing census come statistics on the homes of these people --- size, ownership, type, quality, etc. Since each tract, so far as is consistent with other considerations, is designed to include an area fairly homogeneous with respect to population characteristics, economic status and housing conditions, the tract plan provide a common base for all local statistics --- statistics prepared by city agencies, semi-public organizations and business interests. Thus, it is possible to establish a common denominator for the many kinds of statistical studies that are made by various agencies in Greensboro. It is possible, by use of census tract studies, to make comparisons from year to year and from census to census, establish trends in various neighborhoods, and isolate areas of change within the city which would otherwise be obscured in city totals.

INSTRUCTIONS

The Census Tract Street Index shows the tract in which every house, store or other building in the city is located as determined by its address. All streets are listed alphabetically and after each street appears the range, or possible range, of street numbers with the appropriate tract identified opposite. At the end of the index is a map showing the boundaries of the various census tracts. By reference from the index to the map it is possible to locate the tract in which a particular street number falls.

Where a tract boundary passes down the center of a street, the range of numbers which falls on one side can be quickly determined in the index by the notation of "odd" and "even". The odd numbers fall in one tract and the even fall in the other as indicated.

As an example, suppose we wish to determine the tract in which 2124 Asheboro Street falls. In the index we note that the even numbers fall in one tract and the odd numbers fall in another. Since 2124 Asheboro Street is an even number, we see that it falls in tract 13. To take another example, suppose we wish to plot certain information pertaining to 1715 Elkhart Drive. By referring to the alphabetical index we see that Elkhart Drive is included in two tracts, 4-B and 25-C. Since 1715 Elkhart Drive falls within the range of 1700-1799, this information can be plotted as corresponding to Census Tract 4-B.

Streets appearing in the index without street numbers are included wholly within the corresponding census tract.

For further information on how to use the Census Tract Street Index consult the City's Department of Planning.
